“ For years, I heard endless stories about Brandi's littliest baby with the heart of a Pit Bull who ran the house and kept everyone in line. You couldn't have had a better Mommy! Rest easy baby girl 💜

“Chloe was a legend. Small but VERY mighty, she was a chihuahua who went by many names...Coco. Chlo-tato. Choester. Chloester-toaster. Cholie-molie. Baked Potatey.

She was as extremely fierce as she was extremely small. She lived life in nothing but extremes. She attacked life with the same ferocity and relentlessness as she did the Christmas tree every year.

She was our little sister, but also our tiny little super villain who was planning on taking over the world at any moment. She had plenty of minions at her command to accomplish it. I'm sure her only regret from this life is that she never completed this monumental task of world domination, which would have only bolstered her legendary status.

To be so tiny, she had the biggest heart. She expertly loved each and every one of us, but she cared to individualize it too because she knew exactly what we needed. For example, she loved to pee on me and act grumpy to remind me who was in-charge since I constantly questioned her unwavering status as the reigning tiny dictator of the Smith household.

She may have had very, VERY small toe beans, but I'm sure when she looked behind herself so she could judge us all and accidentally caught sight of her own paw prints, she saw them as large as the size of a dinosaur's. She was a confident, fearless, and very secure girlie!

We will never forget Chloe's presence in our lives since she leaves a dinosaur sized hole in our hearts. I know for a fact that her bestie Aysiah was waiting for her. They have forever now to play together and for Chloe to attack Aysiah's face for no other reason than her breathing too hard.

Love,
Auntie Katie

“ Chloe is a sibling. We grew up together. I had sleepovers with her. She watched us kids get into trouble. Warned us. She saw it all. And she is the best little big fierce and sweet chihuahua in the whole world. The world almost can't contain her big personality. Her body definitely couldn't. She thought she was a giant. God knew what he was doing when he made her extra extraextra small. It was a safety check. Her paws left the smallest mark on the ground but the biggest impression on each of our hearts. We love you Chloe!
