

FurBall Davis

February 7, 2012 - March 29, 2024

"Feb 7, 2012 a solid white little ball of fur was born. I had no idea he would become my Service Dog for the next 12 yrs. I was wounded in combat in Iraq and have difficulty walking without tripping. Furball became my stabilization as well as helping me climb stairs and assisting me in getting up from chairs. He has led me across College football fields, went on camping trips with the cub scouts, school outings, my many doctors appointments ect. He developed a large mass on his shoulder and had it grow very very fast. He was scheduled for surgery but during the pre operation physical an ultrasound found a mass also on his liver. The size, location and his age prevented him from going into surgery. I've lost family members, friends as well as soldiers but this hurt cuts deep! The service dog school has offered another dog but there is no room in my heart yet." - Brian Davis

Tribute Wall

“ Feb 7, 2012 a solid white little ball of fur was born. I had no idea he would become my Service Dog for the next 12 yrs. I was wounded in combat in Iraq and have difficulty walking without tripping. Furball became my stabilization as well as helping me climb stairs and assisting me in getting up from chairs. He has led me across College football fields, went on camping trips with the cub scouts, school outings, my many doctors appointments ect. He developed a large mass on his shoulder and had it grow very very fast. He was scheduled for surgery but during the pre operation physical an ultrasound found a mass also on his liver. The size, location and his age prevented him from going into surgery. I've lost family members, friends as well as soldiers but this hurt cuts deep! The service dog school has offered another dog but there is no room in my heart yet.

Brian Davis - April 09, 2024 at 04:42 PM