“Gomer came to us as a little black puppy and before we knew it, his coat has changed to white. He continued to surprise us with that personality and intelligence. He was stubborn, proud and too smart for his own good at times.

He loved family vacations, setting the example for his younger siblings and leash training. He loved playing outdoors with his big brothers and sisters. He didn't care much for the act of grooming but loved his after look, prancing about.

He was very independent until his mommy was diagnosed with cancer. He began sleeping with his mommy everyday. Never leaving her side, perfectly protective. He remained especially close to her until his passing.

Not very often are we lucky enough to be given a pet with such a big personality and as smart as Gomer. We miss you little man, so much.
