“ August of 2007, I was given my first fur baby as I began life out of high school. We named her Little Bit. A few weeks after having her, she was diagnosed with parvo. Lots of tears and money- she managed to pull through. She was then nick named ‘money’ because she cost a ton to save. A few months later she started suffering from seizures. We adapted and went on with life. We traveled, she helped me through depression when we had a miscarriage, she was my nap snuggle buddy, she grew with me as I was such a baby myself. She moved with us to three different homes, she welcomed both of my boys home as newborns. She was truly my companion.

The last few weeks she took a decline in health. With lots of prayer, we decided to put Money into a permanent peaceful sleep. Life is going to be an adjustment without her but we know now it is the best decision. The vet pulled fluid from her abdomen, and was almost certain she was suffering from a tumor.

My heart is broken but I know Money is sleeping the best she has ever slept. ❤️ ☐ 🌈
