“ MooShoo came to us about a year and a half ago. He was, from his condition, a puppy mill survivor that had outlived his usefulness. He was picked up by animal control and was in terrible condition. I was made aware of him and his condition and immediately made the two hour drive to pick him up. My husband and I immediately fell in love with him and vowed to give him the best life possible for the time he had left. To say that we lost a part of our heart is an understatement. Every day we look for and miss his little muppet looking face. He was our baby and we will miss him forever. The pictures are in order of the day he was picked up at the shelter to shortly before he crossed the Rainbow Bridge.
