

O'Hara Avery

August 17, 2011 - April 16, 2026

Born Orbach N O'Hara of Yahoo Omar and Flying Village on August 17, 2011; ear mark 56935. I didn't meet her until 8 years later after she retired from donating blood at Auburn University's veterinary hospital. She excelled at naps, running (when she felt like it), and announcing both her presence and desires with an imperious bark.

She also showed superdoggy patience when forced to share her space and attention with two annoying younger siblings: Nora the Great Dane and Esme the something.

O'Hara navigated life with heartfelt eagerness so long as it involved food, treats, park excursions, or naps. All else was governed by her unfailing temperance and self-control, yet always with a streak of generosity: knowing my own weakness, she would graciously deign to allow several head pats, ear rubs and kisses before gently informing me, with a shake of her head, that she was finished. She would also pose, however unwillingly, for photographs of her bedecked in finery; though, not wishing to shame the masses with her majesty, she did not often flaunt her queenship.

O'Hara continued in relatively good physical health and mobility until a fall injury resulted in her euthanasia on April 16, 2026. She then proceeded to alert St. Peter--most imperiously--that she was waiting at the pearly gates to receive entry, and then to regale the nine choirs with her freshly regained feats of speed and athleticism. She still spends most of her time napping, however, and ordering the heavenly hosts around until her lady-in-waiting should eventually come and once again take over her post.

--Nica Avery

Tribute Wall

DA

“ Born Orbach N O'Hara of Yahoo Omar and Flying Village on August 17, 2011; ear mark 56935. I didn't meet her until 8 years later after she retired from donating blood at Auburn University's veterinary hospital. She excelled at naps, running (when she felt like it), and announcing both her presence and desires with an imperious bark. She also showed superdoggy patience when forced to share her space and attention with two annoying younger siblings: Nora the Great Dane and Esme the something.

O'Hara navigated life with heartfelt eagerness so long as it involved food, treats, park excursions, or naps. All else was governed by her unfailing temperance and self-control, yet always with a streak of generosity: knowing my own weakness, she would graciously deign to allow several head pats, ear rubs and kisses before gently informing me, with a shake of her head, that she was finished. She would also pose, however unwillingly, for photographs of her bedecked in finery; though, not wishing to shame the masses with her majesty, she did not often flaunt her queenship.

O'Hara continued in relatively good physical health and mobility until a fall injury resulted in her euthanasia on April 16, 2026. She then proceeded to alert St. Peter--most imperiously--that she was waiting at the pearly gates to receive entry, and then to regale the nine choirs with her freshly regained feats of speed and athleticism. She still spends most of her time napping, however, and ordering the heavenly hosts around until her lady-in-waiting should eventually come and once again take over her post.

--Nica Avery

Dominica Avery - May 08 at 05:10 PM

DA

“ 2 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 05 at 09:09 PM

DA

“ 1 file added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 05 at 09:31 AM

DA

“ Dominica Avery sent a virtual gift in memory of O'Hara Avery

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:54 PM

DA

“ Dominica Avery lit a candle in memory of O'Hara Avery

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:53 PM

DA

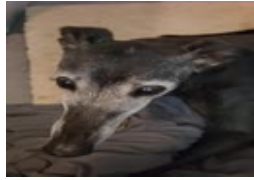

“ 1 file added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:51 PM

DA

“ 2 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:48 PM

DA

“ 3 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:46 PM

DA

“ 4 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:45 PM

DA

“ 3 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 05:42 PM

DA

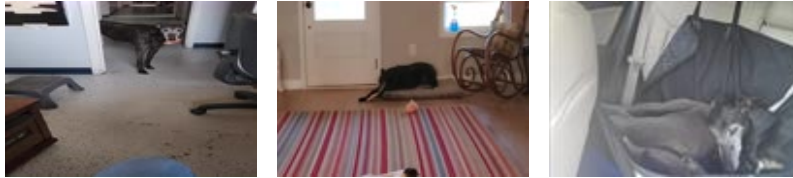

“ 3 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 04:04 PM

DA

“ 3 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 03:57 PM

DA

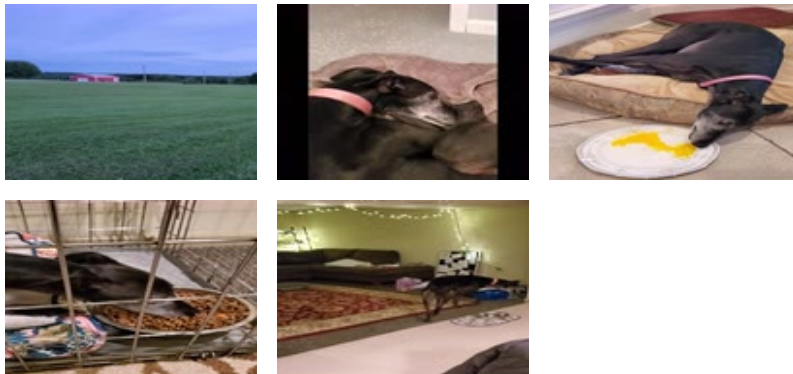

“ 2 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 03:53 PM

DA

“ 5 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 03:49 PM

DA

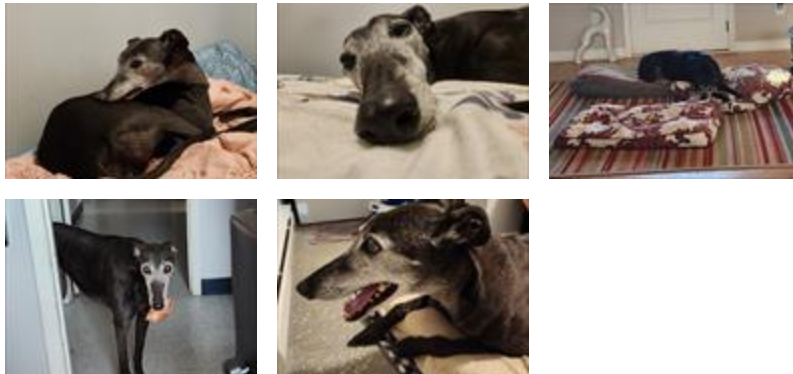

“ 3 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 03:44 PM

DA

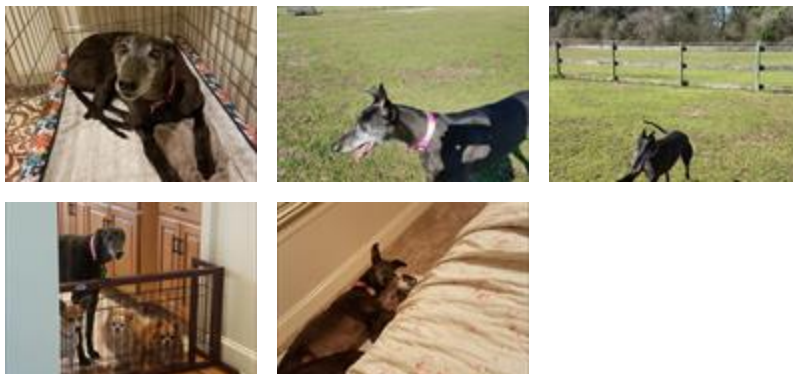

“ 9 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 03:11 PM

DA

“ 17 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 03:07 PM

DA

“ Born Orbach N O'Hara of Yahoo Omar and Flying Village on August 17, 2011; ear mark 56935. I didn't meet her until 8 years later after she retired from donating blood at Auburn University's veterinary hospital. She excelled at naps, running (when she felt like it), and announcing both her presence and desires with an imperious bark. She also showed superdoggy patience when forced to share her space and attention with two annoying younger siblings: Nora the Great Dane and Esme the something.

O'Hara navigated life with heartfelt eagerness so long as it involved food, treats, park excursions, or naps. All else was governed by her unfailing temperance and self-control, yet always with a streak of generosity: knowing my own weakness, she would graciously deign to allow several head pats, ear rubs and kisses before gently informing me, with a shake of her head, that she was finished. She would also pose, however unwillingly, for photographs of her bedecked in finery; though, not wishing to shame the masses with her majesty, she did not often flaunt her queenship.

O'Hara continued in relatively good physical health and mobility until a fall injury resulted in her euthanasia on April 16, 2026. She then proceeded to alert St. Peter--most imperiously--that she was waiting at the pearly gates to receive entry, and then to regale the nine choirs with her freshly regained feats of speed and athleticism. She still spends most of her time napping, however, and ordering the heavenly hosts around until her lady-in-waiting should eventually come and once again take over her post.

--Nica Avery

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 02:42 PM

DA

“ 17 files added to the tribute wall

Dominica Avery - May 04 at 02:05 PM