“ She came to my household, found behind an Italian restaurant surviving on food scraps in the dumpster. For such a young kitten only a few weeks old, she had to learn survival after being abandoned, discarded or lost and how to protect herself from urban predators. Stumpy choose me to be her human and taught me so many things from a little feral who wanted nothing from humans. She taught me the gifts of acceptance, to love as she was without trying her to be change her. Independent, yet gave soft kisses in thanks, paws with her claws retracted, touched my heart in her choosing me. I hoped to outlive her as no one else would probably accept her as she was. How fortunate for me to have had her for 18 years and to have kept my promise for loving her and being there for her transition to her next life. When my time comes, she will greet me at the bridge and I will pick her up again to place my face next to hers...she in turn will give me gentle kisses once again. Thank you for the gifts you gave me Stumpy...

Stumpy was a sweet girl, lucky the right person found her, she gave back her love with sweet kisses. We will miss our sweet babies till we get to there with them. They take a piece of our heart with them when they cross that bridge. Love you me friend and I will miss seeing that sweet girl when visiting.
